National Garden Week Activities Sponsored by:

The 261-acre Waterman Farm is a university hub for leading science and public engagement related to our food system, agriculture, and natural resources, as well as a center where many of our partners can join us to advance knowledge and industry, communicate about science, and prepare future leaders.

Franklin Park Conservatory and Botanical Gardens elevates quality of life and connects the community through educational, cultural and social experiences. The Scotts Miracle-Gro Company Community Garden Campus is a sprawling 4-acre garden open to the public at no charge from dawn until dusk.

The Greater Columbus Growing Coalition, GCGC, is a grassroots 501©(3) organization that supports the growing, processing, transportation, and distribution of local agricultural products. We are always thankful to Straders Garden Center for their generous plant donations every year!
